

Course Income Analysis

1. Monthly Income Trend

The total monthly income shows a generally upward trajectory with some fluctuations (see Figure 1). Income reached its lowest point in March 2022, then peaked in July 2022 with over 2.06 billion IRR. From August onward, income remained relatively high and stable, indicating a strong second half of the year in terms of revenue.

Figure 1: Total Monthly Income

2. Income by Course Type

As illustrated in Figure 2, Barista courses dominate revenue, generating more than 8.3 billion IRR, significantly higher than any other course. The next highest contributors are Pizza (3.28B IRR), Sausage (1.71B IRR), and Burger (1.66B IRR).

Traditional and Kabab courses generated the least income, suggesting lower popularity or pricing.

3. Seasonal Income Distribution

As shown in Figure 3, the highest income was recorded in Summer (5.88B IRR), followed closely by Autumn (5.81B IRR). Spring (4.02B IRR) and Winter (3.47B IRR) had lower contributions. The seasonal pattern aligns with higher student participation in Summer and Autumn, suggesting favourable conditions for course offerings during these times.

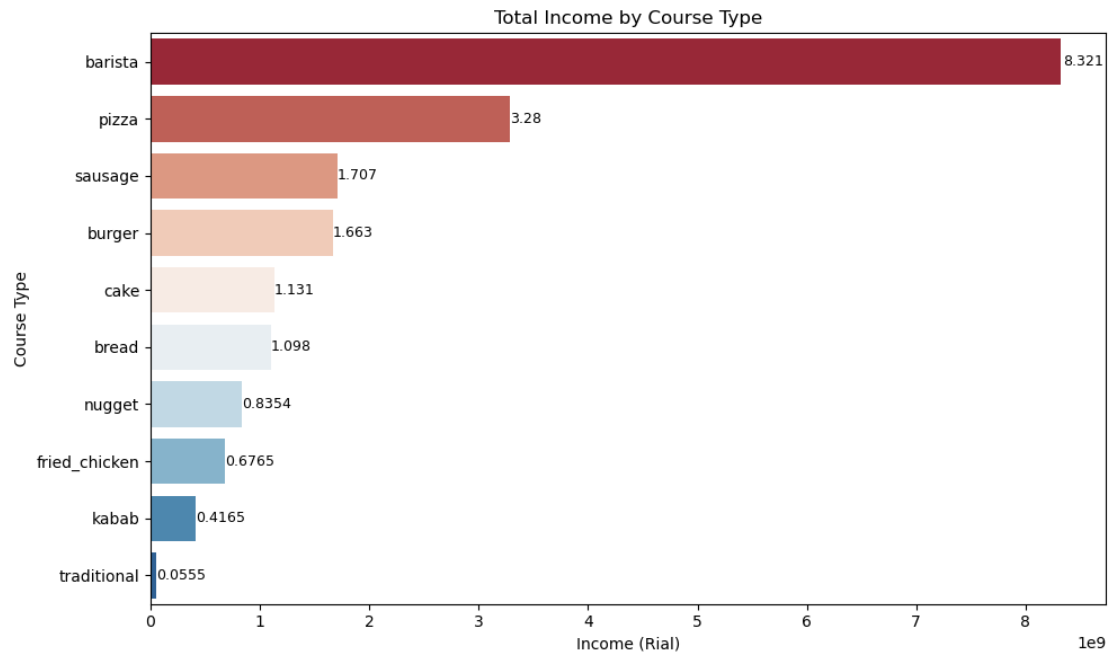

Figure 2: Total Income by Course Type

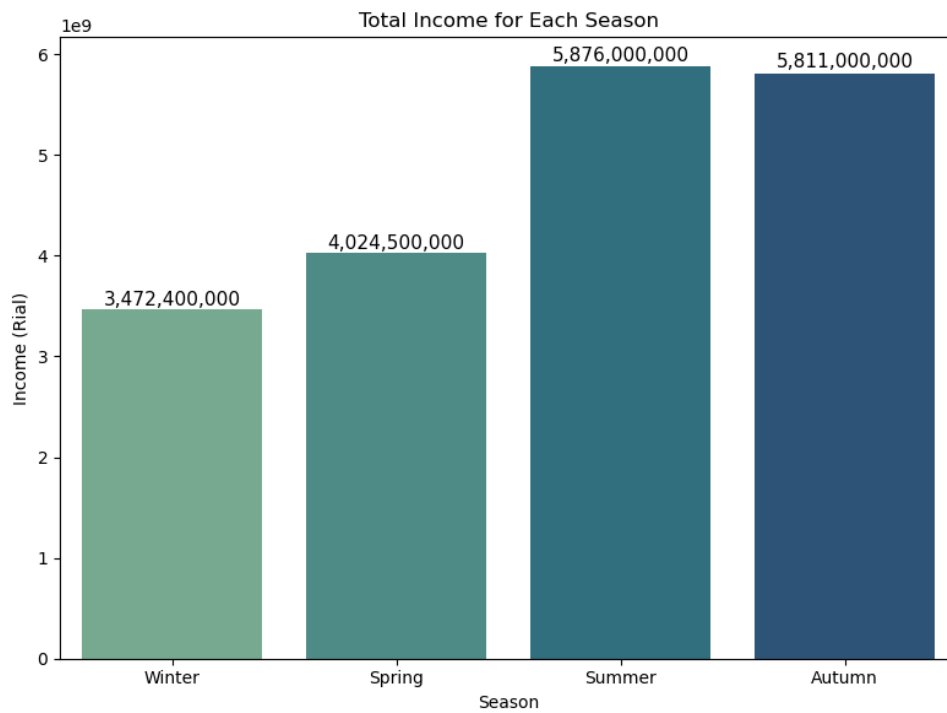

Figure 3: Total Income for Each Season

To better understand the relative contribution of each season, Figure 4 shows the percentage share of each season in the total annual income of 19.18 billion IRR. Together, Summer and Autumn generated over 60% of the year's revenue.

Figure 4: Seasonal Share of Total Annual Income (2022)

Summary

- Barista courses are the top revenue generators by a large margin.
- Income has a generally increasing trend throughout the year, with the strongest revenue in the second half.
- Summer and Autumn are peak revenue seasons, consistent with student enrollment patterns.
- Less popular courses contribute marginally to overall income, indicating potential areas for growth or reconsideration.